The Willing Circle, King's Daughters the Baptist Church, held a Book Sociable on Wednesday evening in the Sunday School room. It was well attended not withstanding the rain storm. The feature of the occasion was a circulating library to which a gentleman paid a small sum money for the privilege of having the book for ten minutes. Then if he found the young lady who was dressed to represent the book he had the exquisite pleasure of es corting her downstairs and discuss books over a dish of ice cream. Then there was cake and candies all to be had for a price. The pleasures for the young men were un bounded, having to find the young lady who represented the book, eat cream, cake and candy with her, and then finally a promenade around the Sunday School room Some of the letters were easier than others to guess, as for instance, Miss Fannie Garrabrant was booked as "Arabian Nights: part of her head-gear, etc.; Miss Pearl

It also has the right to contract for lighting, heating and mechanical purposes, to acquire the franchises of other compaules, also to construct conduits to carry wires in the streets. It is said that its first step will be to buy up or absorb the Newark Gas Light Company, which in view of the agitation just now in Bloomfield about water and light, is of interest to all our citizens.

The Orange Sewers.

The annual report of the Orang Sower Committee was submitted to the Common Council last Monday. Orange is confronted with financial difficulties as the actual cost for completing the sewer system. engineer Bassett says will be 950,000 and possibly a round million-making two hundred thousand dollars in excess of the original estimate. Interesting to Fraternal Insurance

Among the other bills passed by the ast legislature is one which affects the Fraternal or Co-operative Insurance Societies of New Jersey. In Bloomfield alone there are at least ten societies which will have to pay tribute under the new law. The story has more intensity than is usually found in comedy. Its human interest dominates every other quality. With an unbroken record of popular and artistic successes that began with "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows" over three years ago, and to which "The Sportsman" has just been added there is every reason to believe that Charles Frohman's Comedians will make a new and important triumph in "The Silent Battle," Joseph Holland, who is another John Drew, will have a fitting role in the new comedy and all the skilled players will be assigned work that will help to increase their histrionic reputations in the metropolis where they are

A Daring Woman In Thibet Amateur photography is not in high favor in Thibet. The residents of Tarchendo were lately thrown into a great state of excitement by the arrival of a European woman with a camera. She made her appearance riding down the dirty, narrow, winding main street astride a diminutive pony, followed by her cavaliers clad in flannels and straw hats and

They will bear upon one side the head of Queen Isabella of Spain, on the other a picture of the perintendent, she dismounted and tried to set up her camera, but in vain. The crowd so harassed her that she found it impossible. Then she endeavored to induce some native priests to have their portraits taken. But the very idea terrified them, for they are the most abjectly superstitious people in the world, and taking their picture means to their minds robbing them of their souls. But the artist's ambition had been fired by the knowledge that two years before an Englishman visiting the country had failed to take a single photograph, although he had made several attempts. At length she got her stand fixed in a corner of the courtyard, and her companions having driven off the rabble she managed to secure a good view of the Buddhist temple. As she was moving off half a dozen fierce Thibetan dogs, let loose meanwhile, rushed up, seized her staff with their teeth, wrested it away from her, and she was only saved from further molestation by her companions, who succeeded in keeping the dogs at bay and escorting her through the gateway. The scowling priests stood round like statues, draped in their crimson scarfs, and never moved a finger to call

St. Peter and the Boston Woman. This is a story that was once told to St. Peter by a woman sitting outside his gate. He had objected to her entering. although she had answered most of his questions straightforwardly and satisfactorily enough. "I do not like," said St. Peter, surveying her critically, as doubtless was his duty under the circumstances, "I do not like that fretful pucker bety:een the brows. I do not like that deep graved 'line of mockery' that runs crescent wise from the nostril to the lips. Such lines are not popular over there," with a gesture toward the shining gate. "As a rule, we suggest to their owners a temporary sojourn insure their melting out, so to speak."

said St. Peter politely. The woman smiled wanly. "I know as well as you do," said she, "that those lines mean impatience and fretfulness and ill temper and much unloveliness of the sort that is not welcome beyond the whitegate. But what I want to know is. Are we judged by the lines alone, regardless of how we came by them? Do we all fare alike those of us who are born fretful, who achieve fretfulness or who have fretfulness thrust upon them?" St. Peter resignedly settled himself for a colloguy. "This comes," he murmured resentfully under his breath, "of the higher education of women! When they were kept in their places in the lower world, they went to their places in this without boring a saint with argument!" -Boston Commonwealth.

Rise of the Violet. The "modest violet" has outlived its reputation as a neglected, unnoticed flower. Its odor finds place in my lady's boudoir, in toilet water, scent sachet and perfumed bottle. Her dainty clothing is embroidered with violets. Her pretty gauze fan is sewed with them. A tiny bunch of their purple sweetness is tucked in the puffs of her hair, and a large cluster adorns her coat when she walks down the fashionable avenue. Not one of all the flower sisterhood has claimed so much attention in recent years or been so persistently imitated for general use. - Exchange.
